Midlife Women: Bodies, Bones and Sex

The Women's Health Program, Monash University, is presenting an educational conference on midlife women. Up-to-date, accurate and unbiased information to assist the GP and their patient make informed health decisions. Current scientific evidence will be translated into practical material for the GP to use.

The focus is on assisting the GP with answers to the important questions:

- How do I investigate?
- How do I treat?
- When do I refer?

To this end, each GP will receive a resource pack with an outline of all the talks and further information to assist the GP in the surgery consultation. For more information, see the Women's Health Program website at <http://womenshealth.med.monash.edu.au>. This activity has been approved for RACGP QA&CPD points – 12 category-two points.
